PREFACE

Detailed information on the salaries, allowances, and privileges of Members in 76 Commonwealth Parliaments is set out in this volume.

From mid 2004 up until November 2005, the Parliamentary Information and Reference Centre circulated a questionnaire on parliamentary salaries and allowances to all Branches of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. The last survey was conducted in 2001.

This publication is unique in providing authoritative information in a form convenient for reference and comparison.

We would like to express appreciation to all Branch Secretaries who have co-operated in providing material, as without their assistance this publication would not have been possible.

We have generally reproduced the questionnaire in the way that they were answered, though in some instances it was necessary to refer to additional material to answer the specific questions.

In the interests of saving space, only those questions which each individual Branch responded to in the survey have been included. A complete copy of the questionnaire that was sent to each Branch has been included in pages 17 to 22, for reference purposes.

If there are any errors please bring them to the attention of the Parliamentary Information and Reference Centre.

Members requiring further information on any aspect of parliamentary payments or privileges are invited to write to the Assistant Director (Reference Services) at the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Secretariat.

This and past surveys can be found online at www.cpahq.org

To request extra copies write to Mr Shem Baldeosingh, Assistant Director (Reference Services):

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

AFRICA

A Kenya Member's basic salary equals that paid to the Head of a Civil Service Ministry. Members receive allowances for attendance, housing, entertainment and their constituency expenses. MPs are members of a contributory group personal accident insurance scheme. Members are covered by a Medical Plan.

A Lesotho Cabinet Minister and the Presiding Officers receive a basic salary that is in the range of what is paid to the Head of a Civil Service Ministry. Members receive attendance, housing, and constituency allowances. Members receive a loan/duty-free concession to buy a vehicle. A communication allowance is paid but this does not cover stationery nor postage.

The basic salary paid to a Member in Malawi is less than half the amount paid to a secondary schoolteacher. Members receive a loan/duty-free concession to buy a vehicle. They can claim subsistence, constituency, utility and travel expenses.

Payments are made to Members in Nigeria who leave Parliament on retirement or after an electoral defeat. Members are entitled to travel, housing, constituency, communication and equipment allowances. An MP's basic salary equals the salary paid to the Head of a Civil Service Ministry. A Senator's salary is comparable to that of a Senior High Court Judge.

The salary of a Member in Sokoto is double the remuneration paid to a senior judge. Members are entitled to attendance, housing, constituency, travel, postage, stationery, and equipment allowances. Members receive a loan/duty-free concession to buy a vehicle.

In South Africa a Cabinet Minister's salary is comparable to the earnings of a senior judge in the Supreme Court or High Court. A Member's basic salary is less than the average salary paid to a senior civil service lawyer. Parliament pays the travel expenses of Members to commute between their constituency and Parliament. An allowance equal to one month's salary is paid to a Member after electoral defeat.

A senior civil service lawyer is paid more than Ministers, the Presiding Officer and Members in Free State. The constituency allowance does not form part of a Member's salary as it is paid directly to their political party. The spouse of a Minister or Presiding Officer may receive a travel allowance. Members of the Legislature receive a fixed monthly allowance which provides for office, mobile and residential phones. A Government Gazette is published and media reports disclose the salaries of politicians. The public have access to Members' expense information on request.

Members in Limpopo are entitled to constituency, travel and communication allowances.

Each Member in Northern Cape receives a Political Allowance. Members' basic salary and car allowances depend on whether they are newly elected, re-elected or re-elected and holding the same/higher office for a period exceeding 24 months.

A senior civil service lawyer's salary is more than a Ugandan Members' basic salary. The Presiding Officers earn more than Ministers and senior Supreme or High Court judges. Members are entitled to a subsistence allowance which is double their basic salary.

Zambian MPs are entitled to subsistence, constituency and travel allowances. Members receive a loan/duty-free concession to purchase a vehicle. A payment is made to Members who leave Parliament upon retirement or after an electoral defeat.

ASIA

Bangladesh Members receive attendance, medical and travel allowances. Accommodation is provided for all Members and they receive a loan/duty-free concession to buy a vehicle. Members' salaries and expenses are published in the gazette. A communication allowance is paid but stationery, postage and equipment allowances are not covered by this.

Funds are provided to Members in Balochistan to finance development projects in their constituencies. A Member's basic salary is double the salary of a skilled factory worker. Ministers and the Presiding Officer are paid less than a Supreme or High Court judge. Members can claim a communication and equipment allowance.

North West Frontier Members can claim an office maintenance allowance. The Leader of the Opposition and the Presiding Officers are entitled to additional allowances.

A Punjab Member's basic salary is more than the salary paid to a senior lawyer in the civil service. Members are allowed to identify development projects in their constituencies and access a constituency development fund. Housing, attendance, telephone and entertainment allowances can be claimed. Members are required to provide an annual declaration of their assets.

Sri Lankan Members can claim a driver and fuel allowance. An allowance for a cellular phone is also available.

AUSTRALIA

In Australia the salaries paid to senior Civil Servants and to High court Justices are more than those paid to Federal Cabinet Ministers. Income tax is paid on electorate allowances. Members receive a constituency and postal allowance depending on the size of their constituency. There is no communication allowance but telephones, mobiles, faxes, and internet access are provided in Parliament and electorate offices. A travel allowance can be claimed for overseas travel and parliamentary and constituency business. These expenses are tabled in Parliament. A motor vehicle is provided for an annual contribution. No payments are made to Members who retire or are defeated.

The Australian Capital Territory Code of Conduct for Ministers has advice on Post-Separation Employment. Members do not receive a pension. A leased vehicle is provided for a Member's use. Study trip and travel reports of Members are tabled in the House. The Assembly provides postage, communication facilities, stationery and equipment within reasonable limits.

New South Wales Members' basic salary is set at the level of that for a private Member of the House of Representatives in the Federal Parliament, less $500. A Member's salary is automatically adjusted following any increase in the Federal Members' salaries. Details of Members' salaries, expenses and entitlements are published on their Parliament's Internet site.

Office equipment and stationery is supplied free to Members in Norfolk Island. The Assembly meets communication charges for the Member's Parliamentary Office. The Speaker and Deputy Speaker have an office allowance.

A Northern Territory Member's basic salary is pegged at $3,000 less than the basic salary payable to a Federal Member of the House of Representatives. The basic salary is more than that of a Northern Territory secondary schoolteacher and senior civil service lawyer but only half of the salary paid to the Head of a Civil Service Ministry. A Supreme Court Judge earns more than Ministers, including the Chief Minister. A recent review of Members' superannuation entitlements resulted in new legislation being debated in the Assembly. Members are provided with a Government maintained car or they may choose to receive an extra allowance.

Queensland Members are provided with an "Allowance to Members" to meet electorate and constituency needs. Members are provided with an annual Car Allowance which may be used to offset the cost of leasing/buying a motor vehicle.

In Victoria, a Member's basic salary is $1442 less than that of a Federal MP. A residential allowance is paid to Members living a specified distance from Melbourne. Members receive an Electorate Office Budget that covers most spending including training Electorate Office staff.

Members and former members in Western Australia are entitled to unlimited rail travel throughout Australia on government owned railway systems.

BRITISH ISLES AND THE MEDITERRANEAN

In Alderney States' Members are not paid a salary but receive an attendance allowance. Members' expenses are paid when they travel overseas on Committee business. A Member receives an annual allowance of up to 160 British Pounds for communications and stationery.

The Cyprus House of Representatives covers the cost of official communication and stationery. MPs are entitled to a duty-free vehicle every 100 months.

In Jersey there is now an independent States Members Remuneration Review Body (first set up in 2004) that makes recommendations on salaries and allowances.

In the Falkland Islands the media reports on Members' salaries and expenses. A Member's basic salary is less than that of a skilled factory worker.

In Gibraltar a Member's basic salary is less than the salary paid to a secondary schoolteacher. A travel and subsistence allowance is the only allowance received by a Member. There is public disclosure or reporting of Members' salaries and expenses.

All Members in Jersey receive the same pay irrespective of any executive office held. From 2005 all Members can claim an expenses allowance to cover communications costs. An independent States Members Remuneration Review Body (first set up in 2004) makes recommendations on salaries and allowances.

The honorarium paid to a Member in Malta can be compared to the salary paid to a secondary schoolteacher. A Cabinet Minister's salary equals that of a Supreme or High Court Judge salary. Members who leave Parliament on retirement or after an electoral defeat, receive two air tickets and a free, limited telephone service.

In St Helena a Legislative Counsellors' salary equals that of a secondary school teacher. There is public disclosure or reporting of Members' salaries and expenses and the public have access to Members' expense information on request.

Members in the U.K. House of Lords do not receive a salary but their expenses are paid. The basic salary for an MP is in the upper range of remuneration for a senior civil service lawyer. A High Court judge is paid more than a Minister, the Leader of the Opposition and Presiding Officers. MPs are entitled to a staffing allowance and an Incidental Expenses Provision, which is similar to a constituency allowance. The additional cost allowance permits MPs to pay mortgage interest, rent or other expenses associated with staying overnight, usually in London, as a result of parliamentary business. Details of expenses claimed for the financial year 2004/05 were published on the Parliamentary website. A payment is made to Members who leave Parliament upon retirement or after an electoral defeat. The first £30,000 of the payment is tax exempt. Members receive a winding up allowance on retirement, or defeat, which allows them to pay staff redundancies, wind up their offices etc.

A Member's basic salary in Scotland is comparable to the mid-range of salaries for a senior civil service lawyer. Members receive a constituency allowance and a housing allowance to cover the cost of renting or purchasing of property in Edinburgh. A subsistence allowance can be claimed up to certain limits. The public have access to Members' expense information under the Freedom of Information Act. A re-settlement grant is paid after an electoral defeat.

Office costs, staff salaries, housing and constituency allowances can be claimed in Wales. A lump sum is paid to Members who leave Parliament upon retirement or after an electoral defeat.

CARIBBEAN, AMERICAS AND THE ATLANTIC

The basic salary paid to an Antigua and Barbuda Senate Member is comparable to that paid to a skilled factory worker. The basic salary of a House of Representatives Member can be compared to that paid to the Head of a Civil Service Ministry. Members' salaries were last revised in 1994. Members receive a pension after serving two terms and can draw this pension when they are 45. Non-elected Members receive an attendance allowance. A travel allowance can be claimed for overseas travel, parliamentary and constituency business. Members are covered under a Medical Benefits Scheme. There are no limits on the types of jobs ex-Members/Ministers can pursue.

The basic salary for a Barbados MP is less than that of a senior Civil Service lawyer. A Cabinet Minister's salary equals the salary of a Head of a Civil Service Ministry. Members receive a loan/duty-free concession to buy a vehicle. A constituency allowance is provided but communication and stationery costs are not met by the Parliament. Members receive an entertainment allowance.

The Presiding Officers in Belize receive an entertainment allowance. Members receive a loan/duty-free concession to buy a vehicle. Members in both House receive an expense allowance.

British Virgin Island Members' basic salaries are equivalent to the average of what is paid to secondary schoolteachers. A Medical Plan covers Members. A payment is made to Members who leave Parliament on retirement or after an electoral defeat.

Ministers, the Leader of the Opposition and Parliamentary Secretaries are entitled to a subsistence allowance. Members may claim a subsistence allowance if on official business overseas or 16km from the capital. Members are also entitled to a constituency allowance. There is public disclosure or reporting of Members' salaries and expenses. The public have access to Members' expense information on request. The Retiring Allowances (Legislative Service) Act allows a payment to be made to legislators who have served more than an aggregate of 8 years, who have attained the age of 55 and ceased to be legislators or who have provided medical proof of inability to perform the duties of legislator.

Members in Turks and Caicos receive a loan/duty-free concession to purchase a vehicle. Ministers receive a housing allowance and claim entertainment expenses.

CANADA

Senate Members in Canada receive a payment for accommodation and meals in Ottawa. Senators employed by or on contract with the Federal Government can only earn up to $5,000 per year. For every dollar over $5,000, their pensions are reduced by the same amount.

In the House of Commons, salaries and travel expenses are disclosed in the Public Accounts of Canada. The Speaker tables an annual public report of Individual Member's Spending in the House of Commons about office operations, employee salaries, contracting and travel costs charged to the Member's Office Budget. This report also shows the cost of goods and services provided by the House Administration to each Member. Members are provided with a high-speed communication network for their primary constituency office and, if applicable, a second constituency office. Mail addressed to Members is also delivered postage-free.

The Executive Council (Cabinet), Speaker, Deputy Speaker, and Clerk in Alberta receive use, maintenance and fuel costs for a vehicle. Members who leave the Legislative Assembly, including through resignation or defeat, receive a transitional allowance.

British Columbia Members who run for re-election and are defeated receive one month's salary for each year of service. The Head of a Civil Service Ministry receives a higher salary than a Cabinet Minister.

Members in Manitoba can give to charities or non-profit organizations in their constituencies and claim a refund out of their Constituency Allowance. There is also a Transition Allowance and Members elected before April 25, 1995 are eligible for severance pay. The Legislative Assembly and Executive Council Conflict of Interest Act limits the types of jobs Ministers can pursue.

The New Brunswick Legislative Assembly is not subject to the Right to Information Act. Ministers who leave the Legislature must wait a year before entering into any Government contracts.

There is no cap on postage and communications costs for Newfoundland and Labrador Members. Members who leave Parliament on retirement or after an electoral defeat receive a severance payment. A Members' basic salary equals the average salary paid to a secondary schoolteacher.

In North-west Territories the Head of a Civil Service Ministry is paid more than the Premier or a Cabinet Minister. Members are covered under a medical plan. The Legislative Assembly and Executive Council Act, allows the public to access the financial records of any Member. A transition allowance is paid to Members who leave the Legislature after an electoral defeat.

A Nova Scotia Member's basic salary is less than that of a secondary schoolteacher. Ex-Members and Ministers cannot take up employment contracts with the Province for six months. Members who leave the Legislative Assembly, including through resignation or defeat, receive a severance payment.

There are certain specific limits provided for in the Quebec Lobbying Transparency and Ethics Act that apply to the Ministers and Members of the Cabinet about the conduct of lobbying activities. A Member who resigns as a Member of the National Assembly, is defeated in an election or serves out his term as a Member, but is not a candidate in the next election, is entitled to a transition allowance.

The public in Saskatchewan has access to Members disclosure statements but cannot seek expense information.

INDIA

In the Rajya Sabha of India, all positions, except the Chairman, are paid the same salary. This applies to the Lok Sabha as well, except the Speaker is also paid the same as Members and Ministers. Every member is given a grant under the "Members of Parliament Local Area Development Scheme" (MPLADS) to carry out development work in their constituency. Members are given free use of a flat or bungalow while in office. A spouse accompanying a Member is entitled to travel on trains to any part of India. A Members' spouse is also entitled to make use of the Members air travel allowance.

In Himachal Pradesh the Chief Minister and Ministers are paid less than the Head of a Civil Service Ministry or a High Court judge. Every Member receives a loan to buy a motorcar or to build a house. Funds are provided to Members to finance development projects in their constituencies. Members receive a constituency allowance. A Member's' spouse is allowed to escort the Member on travel in India. There is public disclosure or reporting of Members' salaries and expenses. The Assembly meets communication and stationery costs. Members receive an allowance for books and periodicals. The Chief Minister and Ministers receive an extra allowance and an increased constituency allowance. Funds are provided to Members to finance development projects in their constituencies under an Area Development Project.

PACIFIC

Members in New Zealand who leave Parliament on retirement or after an electoral defeat receive three months salary and Members first elected before 1999 have rebated travel entitlements for life. Members' salaries and expenses are made public. Each Member has a support budget that can be used for postage, printing, equipment, stationery, advertising and renting an office. If on parliamentary business, Members can claim unlimited domestic air travel, access to taxis and rental cars. A Member's basic salary is double that of a secondary schoolteacher.

Ministers and the Presiding Officers in Samoa are entitled to a free phone, free postage and a vehicle. A Member's basic salary is comparable to that of a senior civil service lawyer.

SOUTH-EAST ASIA

In Perlis a Minister and the Presiding Officer is paid the same salary as a Head of a Civil Service Ministry. Members are entitled to attendance, subsistence, entertainment and travel allowances. Funds are provided to Members to finance development projects in their constituencies. A postage and communication allowance is available. An allowance for a driver is available.

Ministers, the Speaker, and Assistant Ministers in Sarawak are entitled to a housing allowance. Members receive an attendance and subsistence allowance. Members can access a rural project fund. A medical plan and free medical facilities are provided.

Funds are provided to Members to finance development projects in Terengganu. Members receive a loan/duty-free concession to buy a vehicle. Members are entitled to housing, entertainment and travel allowances. The Assembly pays for communication and postage charges.

In Singapore the basic salary differs for Elected MPs and Nominated and Non-Constituency MPs. Members are entitled to a Staff Allowance. A travel allowance can only be claimed for overseas conferences and official visits.

USING THIS SURVEY

It is particularly important to note that salaries are quoted at a per annum rate, unless otherwise stated.

The terms used to denote salaries and allowances and other matters often vary between Parliaments. We have thought it better to retain the terminology of each Parliament, since the context makes clear the meaning intended.

Similarly we have given the salaries and allowances in the local currency without converting them into sterling or dollars. For ease of comparison, we have provided a currency table, which converts the currency unit of Commonwealth countries into pounds sterling and United States dollars.

In several of the Indian entries, the term lakh is used to denote one hundred thousand.

It is essential that when looking at the salaries of office holders, the answer to "Are Ministerial and Presiding Officer's salaries additional to a Member's basic salary?" is taken into account. The question appears at the end of Box 2. If an office holder's salary is additional need to be added together to give the total salary.

Users of this survey are advised to read the entire entry for a particular Branch, as on occasion there are other payments or allowances made to Members which are noted under section 11.

RESULTS

The survey details the responses of Commonwealth Parliaments. It includes details of national, state, provincial and territorial parliaments.

Not surprisingly, since the economic and social conditions of member countries differ so widely, the overall impression of this survey is one of variety. But in the vast majority of countries it is accepted that Members of Parliament should be provided with means, whether a salary, allowances, facilities or services, that enable them to perform their parliamentary duties effectively.

COMPARATIVE SALARIES

Section 3 attempts to provide data so that the salaries of Parliamentarians can be compared with the salaries paid to other types of worker in the same jurisdiction.

There is of course an enormous range across the Commonwealth in the basic salary paid to Members of Parliaments.

In addition to the office holders specified in the questionnaire, several Branches pointed out that Leaders of other official opposition parties, and their Whips, also receive an additional salary.

TAXATION

In many of the Parliaments in the survey, the salaries of Members are taxed.

PENSIONS

Many Parliaments provide either contributory, or non-contributory pensions. Several do not provide a pension plan.

ALLOWANCES

In a majority of Parliaments, Members receive attendance and/or subsistence allowances. Frequently these are paid according to attendance or time spent on parliamentary business.

Allowances for travel and constituencies cover a wide variety of geographical and demographic circumstances.

REVISION OF SALARIES AND ALLOWANCES

The process of revision varies from Parliament to Parliament. While several Parliaments in the survey only revise "occasionally" or "irregularly", others do look at salaries and allowances once a year or after every general election. In some state or provincial Legislatures, revision is related to that of federal Parliaments.

BENEFITS AFTER LEAVING PARLIAMENT

It will be seen from this section of the questionnaire that several Parliaments, recognizing the difficulties faced by ex-Parliamentarians, do make some sort of financial payment to ease the transition back to non-parliamentary life. Such benefits can include relocation allowances, or one-off payments linked to the level of their parliamentary salaries. Some of these payments are only available to Parliamentarians who fail to get re-elected or have to resign for health reasons.

EMPLOYMENT AFTER PARLIAMENT

In some jurisdictions former Parliamentarians are limited (usually by a time-constraint factor) as to which occupations they can follow upon leaving Parliament. Such measures are intended to prevent a former Member from being able to derive unfair advantage from contacts made and information accrued during his or her parliamentary career.

Are there any limitations on the types of jobs ex-Members/Ministers can pursue?

Extract from the Code of Conduct for Ministers adopted February 2004. Does not apply to ex Members.

Post-Separation Employment

Ministers should exercise care in taking up employment or business activities in the period immediately after leaving Government. Special care should be taken in acceptance of offers of employment from, or becoming engaged in the internal management of the affairs of, persons, companies or other bodies:

- which are in a contractual relationship with the ACT Government;
- which are in receipt of subsidies or benefits from the Government not received by a section of the community at large;
- in which the Government is a shareholder;
- which are in receipt of Government loans, guarantees or other forms of capital assistance; or
- with which the departments or branches of Government are, as a matter of course, in a special relationship.

Where a Minister receives an offer of employment and intends to leave the Government in order to take up the offer, the Minister should immediately disclose his or her acceptance of the offer to the Chief Minister, or in the case of the Chief Minister, to Cabinet. The Chief Minister, or Cabinet where appropriate, has the discretion to alter Ministerial arrangements in light of any offer accepted.

In all areas, confidential information gained during office will not be used and care should be taken to ensure that preferential treatment for the new employer or the business is not obtained by the use of contacts and personal influence by the former Minister and offices.

Is there a time limit? No.

The public is entitled to inspect and have copies of records pertaining to claims paid for reimbursement of expenses for Members. Records are available in the Members' Allowances office. Fees are charged if search and preparation time is in excess of two hours or more than 25 photocopies are requested. In addition, by June 30th of each year, Members are to prepare an annual report summarizing expenses claimed under all allowances from which they have been reimbursed and are to provide a copy to the Speaker for tabling in the House. These reports are available for public inspection free of charge.

8. BENEFITS AFTER LEAVING PARLIAMENT

Are any payments made to Members who leave Parliament upon retirement or after an electoral defeat?

Members elected prior to April 25, 1995 are eligible for severance pay of one month's basic indemnity for each year of service, up to 12 months. Members elected after April 25, 1995 are not eligible for severance pay.

There is also Transition Allowance. This is one month's basic pay for each year of service with a lifetime maximum of 6 or 12 months paid on a bi-weekly basis. A member who is defeated is eligible for up to 12 months and a member ceasing for any other reason (other than resigning outside an election period and not for health reasons) is eligible for up to 6 months continuation of basic pay.

What is the tax treatment of these benefit? Severance allowance is treated as a retirement benefit and tax sheltering is allowed. Transition allowance is taxable.

Are such persons eligible for state unemployment benefits? Members would have to apply individually to the Federal Human Resources and Development Department. Members are not covered by unemployment insurance.

10. OTHER INFORMATION

Please specify any important monetary or non-monetary allowances which are not covered by this questionnaire:

Allowances:

In 1996, the system for reimbursing Members out of pocket parliamentary related expenses and travel constituency expenses was changed to an accountable block funding. The allowance each Member receives depends on the size of the district, the distance to and from the capital St. John's and the historic pattern of expenditures for that district. The allowances vary from $15,500 (St. John's District) to $89,100 (a large remote district, where travel is expensive).

Severance:

Severance is calculated at one month's current basic indemnity for each year of service and prorated for part of the year's service. Minimum severance is three months pay; maximum is twelve months pay.

Is there a legal minimum wage in your country? If so, what is it?	YES. $ 7.45 per hour.

3. INCOME TAX

Is income tax paid on the basic Member's salary?	YES
Is income tax paid on allowances?	An amount of $750 shall be added to taxable income in compliance with Québec's tax provisions.

QUÉBEC, CANADA

4. PENSIONS

Do Members receive a pension?	YES
If so, is this a contributory pension scheme?	YES
If so, what is the level of contribution?	9 % of their salary
At what age can the pension be drawn?	1. Over 60 years old: no reduction 2. Anyone under 60 years of age is entitled, upon application, to a pension that is reduced for its duration by 0.25% for each month between the date on which the pension is payable and the date of the person's sixtieth birthday.
How long is a Member required to serve prior to qualifying for a pension?	There is no minimum time.
Does the pension plan provide ongoing benefits to Members' dependents?	In the event of the death of a Member, the spouse will receive 60 % of the pension that was paid or would have been paid to him. However, the spouse will receive a pension equal to 50 % or 100 % of the pension that was paid or would have been paid to him if he chose that option before January 1, 1992. In addition, if he has children at the time of his death, each will receive a pension equal to 10 % of the pension that was paid or would have been paid to him. The percentage is 20 % if he has no spouse. If more than four children are entitled to a pension, the maximum amount payable will be divided equally between them. The pension payable to his spouse or children cannot exceed the amount of the pension that was paid or would have been paid to the Member.
Are there any limitations on Membership of the pension scheme? (please define):	Every person who becomes a Member of the National Assembly after December 31, 1991 may elect not to participate in the plan by giving notice of his intention to the Office of the National Assembly. In this case, he is deemed to have ceased to be a Member on the date on which the notice is received by the Office. He may then ask for the actuarial value of the retirement pension accumulated to date to be transferred to a locked-in retirement account. Payment of that amount cancels entitlement to a retirement pension in respect of the transferred portion. Anyone who has sent a notice of intention not to participate in the plan may subsequently elect to participate by giving notice to that effect to the Office.

UNITED KINGDOM

8. LEGISLATION

Please specify the major legislation which deals with Members' salaries and allowances:
Members' salaries and allowances are set by resolution of the House of Commons. Ministerial salaries are set in accordance with the Ministerial and other Salaries Act 1975.

Is there any public disclosure or reporting for Members' salaries and expenses?
Details of salaries are in the public domain.

Do the public have access to Members' expense information upon request?
In October 2004 both Houses of Parliament released details of the expenses claimed by Member for the financial years 2001/02, 2002/03 and 2003/04; and in October 2005 details of expenses claimed for the financial year 2004/05 were published on the Parliamentary website.

Totals received by each Member, under the following headings, were published by the House of Commons authorities:
Additional Costs Allowance or London Supplement, Incidental Expenses Provision, Staffing allowance, Members' travel, Members' staff travel, centrally purchased stationery, central IT provision, and other central budgets (such as the winding up allowance or temporary secretarial allowance).

9. BENEFITS AFTER LEAVING PARLIAMENT

Are any payments made to Members who leave Parliament upon retirement or after an electoral defeat? Yes.

What is the tax treatment of these benefits? First £30,000 is tax exempt.

Are such persons eligible for state unemployment benefits?

Unemployed people who are "available for and actively-seeking work" may claim Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA). Contribution-based JSA is payable for the first six months, provided the person has made sufficient National Insurance (i.e. social insurance) contributions. Thereafter (or from the outset, where the person has insufficient contributions), JSA is means-tested. The legislation governing JSA is the Jobseekers Act 1995 and the Jobseeker's Allowance Regulations 1996 (SI 1996/207)

People who receive certain "compensation payments" at the end of their employment can however be treated as still in work for a period following the actual termination of the employment, and are therefore not entitled to JSA for that period. In a job where there is no period of notice due to an employee, the period is calculated using a standard formula. The total compensation payment is divided by the weekly amount the person would have been entitled to under employment protection legislation. This current weekly amount (from 1 February 2005) is £280 a week.

There is however no specific mention in social security regulations or case law of how the Resettlement Grant is to be treated for benefits purposes, and the Commons authorities are not aware of any cases involving former Members who have claimed JSA, so it cannot be confirmed whether the Resettlement Grant would indeed be treated in this way.

UNITED KINGDOM
